

Nate Riddle bio

A native of Rockingham County, Virginia, Nate Riddle has lived in Staunton for the past three years. Nate currently serves as the executive director of a homeless services agency in Harrisonburg. He is committed to expanding access to health and human services and working to meet the needs of often marginalized populations. Nate is a proven servant leader who has a record of improving operational effectiveness and efficiencies, creating, and growing partnerships, and building genuine relationships with community around a shared vision.

Prior to his appointment to the VCSB board of directors, he served on the City of Staunton's inaugural Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Commission, continuing his commitment to community service. Nate also serves on the board of directors of his church, Blue Ridge CASA for Children, and is the Deputy Chair of the Media & Advocacy Committee of the Western VA Continuum of Care. He earned his bachelor's in psychology and a Master of Public Administration from Regent University in Virginia Beach, and is currently working toward his Doctor of Public Administration at California Baptist University (remotely).
